1972 Triumph TR6 the Triumph TR6 was a British sports car which was built by Triumph Motor Company. Of the 83,480 TR6's produced between 1968 and 1976 all but 8,370 were exported. This Triumph TR6 is the recipient of an older restoration at which point it appears that it went through a color change. Now a bright red this TR6 was originally Sienna with a black interior. The body work on the car is of average quality and appears solid. The paint remains to have good depth and shine. The underside of the car is structurally sound upon observation. The seats upholstery of the TR6 has been upgraded with a black and white weave in the center, the dash is crack free and there are no excessive wear areas on the carpet. The black canvas top although weather tight has some wear areas as well as cracking in the plastic windows. The engine in this TR6 has been updated with Weber side draft carburetors with K and N air filters as well as a long tube header for some extra horsepower. This Triumph has a great rumble from the sport exhaust. Although it is running great the clutch engages close to the floor which would indicate a need of a new clutch in the near future. The title for the car indicates that there is a odometer discrepancy. There are Michelin tires mounted on factory wheels both in good condition. Drive and enjoy this desirable British Sports Car the way it is or bring it to the next level. Either way it will be a great driving experience.
